FACTS AND FIGURES

GAINED AT THE OFFICE OF THE CITY CLERK AND TREASURER

concerning the Recent Expenses of the City Government---Talk of Councilmen.

Concerning the city finances, City Treasurer C. L. Adams and Carney, of the clerks office, yesterday stated that in their opinion the city at the last of the year would run short of money unless the city council put more of a check on expen-ditures. During the last year the city had paid out for miscellaneous purposes over $75,000, and much more would doubtless, according to the natural run of events would be required this year. The calculation brought out the probable amount coming into the city treasury during the year about $120,000. Of this $84,000 come in as taxes, the remaining to be placed in et any other paper of equal value as an advertising needlum.

Of the $50-, advance. the treasury through the city clerk in 000 to come from these two sources, the latter was expected to turn at least an average of $2,000 per month making $30,000 and the balance to come from the city licenses. source was figured down more closely W. W. Hunter, of St. Louis, is in the than last year as about $10,000 had been secured last year from real estate men

As to the money from the police judge P. A. Fowler was among yesterday's ar- the month of January last shows $704.36. A drop of nearly $1,400 from the previous month. His honor so far this month shows an average little better than for Carl Sayler, Eaton, O., is looking over January and the police court stock seems to be very low in the market and not likely to put in $2,000 per month.

The money from the city clerk promise to be something less than last year, and taking it all in all it is not the opinion at the office of city clerk and treasurer that from the various sources of revenue, the city this year will get $120,-000. While it was expected to get this amount into the treasury for expenses, it could not be easily estimated what amount would be necessary to keep in good repair the working machinery of the city. might take less than that amount or it might take more. The experience, how ever, so far has made it very suspicious that at the present rate of expenditures even more than $120,000 will be needed. The city has collected from the county $50,900 since November, and from other sources about $8,000. Of this there is now in the city treasury $10,000, and according to the assistant city clerk's statement there are nearly enough bills now awaiting the action of the council next Monday night wipe out the remaining $10,000 now in the treasury. The fact that from November, less than three months, the expenses have been about $60,000, or $15,000 less than for the entire last year, and the money now expected in the treasury for this year's expenses is less than double the amount already spent causes the opinion in the city clerk and treasurer's office that at the present rate of contracting bills the council may want more money by the end of the year than they can command.

Some of the members of the city council were accosted on the question yesterday and strange as it may seem one or two seemed to have given the question little thought and were not prepared to venture even a guess at the probable income of the what would be expended or had been expended. Others wever, seemed to remember something about the many bills and the 2:20 gait of expense so far and were somewhat concerned over the matter. One of the member commenced to tell about this and that bill amounting to so and so, which had been contranted that did not advance the cause of civilization to any alarming extent and in all probability if it had not been contracted the city would have gone along tage gained such expenditure The wind changed last evening and came have known the difference. This wry face from the north, lowering the mercury a over spilt milk, however, did not seem to bring any immediate relief and the only thing that seemed to come to his mind in the way of salvation was to grasp the purse string more firmly or adopt Walter S. Roberts, Esq., an attorney of costing the city $1,400 per month and their work turning in half that amount for last month was a paralyzer he could scarcely get over. He hoped however, that the police would strike anliam Greiffenstein and will probably be in other month like August last, when they upset into the lap of his honor $4,475.65. He did not, however, think the police "where" it is, and the name of the secre- the rule had been for them to more than pay their way and he did not rejoice at the slight variance.

"In a measure," he continued, "this can not be helped. This is a new city and the council is not paying for repairs but actually tant secretary of the board of trade, has because the purchase price is always great-No one, I take it, can object to this and the increasing with each council meeting as expenses. It would be difficult to mention everything, but bear in mind this great up to the big figures first cost of a number of things, we are compelled to get and even next year I can see how it is possible for the city's expenses to be less than this year. A rather weak effort for getting money was attempted on a Wichita lady, bearing date of a few days ago. She is now nineteen years old and her foster parents were personally acquainted with her parents, knowing she had neither brother nor sister. "Let Us Reason Together"-The Afternoon Meeting.

Mr. Wilson selected a number of scriptural passages which were read in the afternoon meeting, bearing on the subject of holiness. Mr. Wilson would designate the questions and some one in the audience would read them when explanations were given. Numerous questions were asked by individuals in the audience, which occupied much time and caused some considerable controversy. THE EAGLE has, on several occasions, expressed a belief that these discussions were and actual hinderance to the cause. They are instances in which the letter is allowwere in attendance and some others have ed to suppress the spirit. The religious been added to the membership. The occates a high temperature of fervor, but runs down in some of the afternoon meetings to the extent that warns of the near approach of a cold wave. There can be no doubt that these meetings would result in good if people would ask such questions as are obstacles in their way to salvation. There is room for suspecting that a great many people load themselves up with quostions to be fired at Mr. Wilson during these meetings merely to gratify a disposition for controversy, and to show that their feelings are not in harmony with the work. Of course it would be a different matter to tell what motives would prompt any one to interfere with a revival of religion. Any one not in sympathy with the cause should not object to people getting enjoyment in this We therefore conclude that no one really intends injury, but this love of controversy is too often the only object sought

There was one question sprung in the afternoon meeting yesterday and much time occupied by a gentleman in continued questioning that involved intricate the logical problems upon which a good sized book might be written and still leave some people in doubt. The question was in regard to confession, and the extent to which penitent is required to go in correcting injuries done to his fellow men before he can obtain absolution. A great throng attended the meeting last night. At 7 o'clock every seat in the great church seemed to be occupied, but the stream kept coming and chairs were brought from the class rooms and placed An the aisles and in the open space around the altar. The lecture room was opened and the sliding doors raised and in a very short time it too was filled, and men pushed their way through the throng with chairs elevated above their heads and deposited them in every vacant space in lecture room and in the space under the gallery. People came in streams long after the house seemed to be filled, and ladies filed down the narrow aisles and around the altar when there seemed to be no possible chance of their getting seats. But the people kept tainly a violinist of decided ability. The pushing and moving and a place always was secured.
